W. J. Hatton of Los Angeles One Who Helped Salvage the Cargo

Los Angeles, March 25.
Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

In the March 9 and 12 issues I saw two articles written about the wreck of the steamship Cambridge. These letters were very interesting to me as I was one of the survivors mentioned who helped salvage the steamer on Old Man's Ledge. I was living at that time in Port Clyde and the villagers heard of the disaster early in the morning of Feb. 10, 1886. Capt. Tobias Teel got together a crew in his schooner Chapparel and started for the wreck, I among them.

The day was clear and fine. The wind was east, but very light. The sea was as smooth as a billiard table, as the old saying is. We arrived there in a short time. It was low tide and we found the steamer right on top of the ledge with her bow broken off. She had struck with such force that she ran right on and far enough to let the bow break down.

We anchored nearby and loaded dories with the most valuable freight we could find and carried it to the vessel.

The weather kept fine and the sea smooth for two days, and we saved a lot of valuable goods. When the tide was low the hull of the vessel made a lee and we could work to better advantage until the tide rose again.

The most valuable things we saw were the ones we took. Some of the things as I remember were barrels of flour and kegs of nails because they were easy to handle. We also saved lots of dry goods, bolts of cloth, etc. They were packed in big cases. We had to break them open and carry them away by the bolt but we saved a lot of it that way. I cannot remember all we secured at this late date—49 years—but we saved a lot for the owners and turned in every thing to the agents at Stimpson's wharf. We had half of the appraised value for our part; my part was $25, and I thought that was a lot for my two days' work.

I remember the men from Monhegan hoisting out the piano, but we did not think it worthwhile to try to save it. There are many more interesting things that I might write about the wreck of the Cambridge, but this will be enough for now. One thing more comes to my mind, how many are now living who were at the wreck? I can only think of two who were there. Perhaps we may hear from others through the paper.

W. J. Hatton.

[Mr. Hatton's interesting letter will revive many memories, and, we hope, will induce others to tell us of their experiences. Meantime let's hear more from Mr. Hatton on the subject.—Ed.]

MIGHTY STRUGGLES

Being the Story of What Happened In Triple Header Monday Night

The long heralded struggle between the Forty and Lions Clubs began Tuesday night when two very strong and youthful appearing quintets trotted onto the Gym floor duly warned and loudly encouraged by their proud "brothers," daddies, wives and sweethearts. At the start the now most experienced Lions played circles around their prey, and the quarter ended 9-0. But the Forty Club boys, alarmed by the awful grimaces on the face of Lou Cook and armed with the valuable side-coaching received from Fred Black, decided that this tail-chasing of the Lions had got to stop.

With Lawrence and Russell doing the scoring and Orne performing some fine defense, the half ended 11-9, still in favor of the Lions. Now it was Link's turn to worry. The last half was marked by some spectacular heaves by Sezak and Knowlton for the Lions and Cook of the Forty, and a rough (and tumble) defense on both sides. Only at the near end did the old Lion's head on the chest of those snappy purple and gold uniforms begin to shake in glee. The score at the end was 26-18.

Sandwiched between the feature games the fans were treated to an exhibition of what basketball used to be, when the Forty Club Old Guard tackled the Lion Townsends. Various species and degrees of attire were noted, much of which came tumbling off sweater by shirt as the heat of the game and of the brow increased rapidly. Noteworthy of mention was the struggle between the Black Shirt of the Fascists, (said shirt a bit moth-eaten) and the Blue Shirt of Ireland (?). Critics believed Pete had the best of the struggle, but Axel got the ball. Flashes of former fame were shown by McRae, Tirrell and Newman for the Lions, and Black, Cook and Wentworth of the Forty Club. Daris should have been a Lion so viciously did he shake his hoary head and tackle not only his man but, verily, the whole Lion team. After much puffing and many a bind in the central anatomy the game ended 18-14 with the Lions on the tottering edge.

With the loss of their center, Mr. Bowden, who was substituted ably by a former Rockland star, Walter Gay, the R.H.S. faculty dropped a hard fought game to a smooth-working outfit of Knox County Coaches Iron-men Knowlton and Sezak after a close contest with the Forty Club seemed nary a bit fatigued, and, with Gay, kept the score even till the fading moments of the struggle. Durrell displayed his usual swift and tricky floor work, and Libby and McCarty played a strong defense. For the Coaches Perkins starred but it was Grafton who thrilled the fans by several beautiful long shots. The game ended with the score 38-30.

Postal Telegraph Co. Already In Its New Quarters—And Likes 'Em

If you walk straight down School street today, crossing Main you will find yourself in the new office of the Postal Telegraph Co., so nearly a replica of the old office that you would scarcely notice the difference were it not for the attractive newness of things.

The change is one factor of the evolution now in progress in The Thorndike Hotel block, which is being remodeled to admit the tenancy of Fuller-Cobb. The Postal office has gone two doors north to occupy half of the store known as the Crockett Baby Shop, to which it has been a near neighbor for 11 years. Among those who aided in the transfer was "Bert" Pease, a veteran operator, who recalled that it was just 32 years ago that he helped move the Postal telegraph office in Chicago. Perry Johnson from the main office in Boston had charge of the transfer, no detail of which escaped the eagle eye of Manager Frank C. Pratt, whose long and efficient service has made him a fixture in the community.

The steel ceiling of the new office is done in old ivory, the walls are cream colored, the dado tan, and the baseboard black, this being the standard arrangement of the Postal Telegraph Co.

The new office has steam heat and modern electric lights and the installation of classy fixtures awaits only their arrival.

AN OCTOGENARIAN'S VIEWS

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

For the past two years we are experiencing or enjoying a New Deal. I believe the idea was that the rich should help the poor. We were of the opinion that the rich man would have something to say about how many and how much he would help, regardless of the well founded ideas of Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Townsend, or Mr. Long. From recent figures given by the above mentioned gentlemen it would seem that the more folks we help, the more we have to help (maybe the New Deal has not started functioning yet).

The latest form of relief, help or assistance, is in the form of a pension for the aged, and it seems to have gained considerable headway in political circles. Nearly any insurance company could quickly give you the figures for financing this proposition—excessive taxation, or confiscating property for the benefit of the State, which does not bring about a healthy condition for either the State or the citizen, be he rich or poor.

In the circles where I lived, worked, and grew up, whenever an individual or community was to be helped someone started a list, signed his name at the top and the amount he would give opposite his name, which indicated to the public just how much he was interested in the cause.

Judging from what I have read concerning the old age pension, it seems that the frugal classes are to be taxed so that the unfortunate, or profligate, may live in abundance. I have also noted that those who are pushing the hardest for it do not submit the amounts they expect to contribute to put it over, and hence I think that their interest in the matter may be a little one-sided.

An old age pension, in my opinion, would be a good thing for the country, but so far as I have seen, no figures have indicated that we are able to finance our present living, a future pension, and on top of that a pension for the passing generation.

OUR DUTY TO THE BUDDIES

With the closer approach of the American Legion's State convention in this city there is developing a broader knowledge of its scope and what it will mean financially to Rockland. Receipts aggregating $60,000 is regarded as a conservative estimate, and probably nearer $70,000. Lots of new money to dump suddenly upon a city not too plentifully supplied with revenues, and made possible because the enterprise (better call it audacity) shown by the leading spirits in Winslow-Holbrook Post, No. 1.

This influx, and it may be rightly designated as a Godsend, is not coming without some sacrifice on our part, however. To properly entertain this convention—which will in reality be four conventions, bringing into Rockland 25,000 delegates and visitors—there must be an initial outlay, and this will not be far from $4,000 if our Legion Post is to play host on a scale which will leave the city nothing to apologize for after the visitors have gone back to their wide-spread homes.

As a municipality Rockland has done itself proud by appropriating $1000 toward the defrayal of that expense. The Legion had planned to raise $2000 through the advertising which will appear on the official program, but to date has only about half that amount in sight. The extreme value of such advertising during the largest convention ever to be held in this section of Maine is not to be sensed offhand. It is only when the city is jammed to the doors with holiday visitors, ready to spend money freely, and to distribute that money among firms which have stood in with the "buddies" that the real significance will be brought home.

The rates for advertising in the official program may be deemed high, and they are high, but this is an extraordinary occasion, destined to have extraordinary results. The American Legion boys who were not found wanting when the country so sorely needed their services now appeal to the civic pride and patriotism of the business men of Rockland and vicinity. There must be no failure and no ground for subsequent regret or apology.

MAKES CAUSTIC ATTACK

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

When a fellow makes such erroneous assertions and submits the unreliable advice as you have depicted Hon. Robert Hale to have done in your March 19 issue in an address to The Women's Educational Club, it's safe to assume that he doesn't know his lesson very well. They say it's better, if you are going to pose as an educator of the public, to first "make sure you're right, then go ahead."

I don't propose to dissect the entire article, some of which is certainly O. K. but I feel that certain misleading propaganda seemingly flaunted by agents of a plutocratic gang of "Money Changers in the Temple" should be challenged by somebody who will set the truth aright.

Hale advocates "useful thinking about social security . . . to distinguish between diversified ideas instead of whooping for a good time" as he placards the acts of Huey Long and similar reformers. Well, it is up to the honorable gentleman to take some of his own advice home and profit by it, and not lead others astray as to the actual facts in the case. The point I am finding fault about is encompassed in these words he is quoted to have uttered to the ladies.

He said "The government policy of budgetary inflation . . . whenever the experiment has been made in human history, has led to utter disaster . . . the government prints paper money, but can never get enough; prices go on up until business and employment are at a standstill; at this point the paper money, held in universal contempt, is thrown away and a new metallic currency is restored in which confidence exists and prices are relatively stable; we begin at the beginning again; the nation is bankrupt; its credit gone, etc."—and thus his destructive criticism continues for what reason?

There can be but two answers. First, if he is sufficiently quipped to know the truth as to the financial history of over a hundred years of our Government's successful use of "printing press money," then he has conjured up the rankest kind of balderdash to fool an unsuspecting public anxious to know the real rights of the money question—but he's too late for millions are being hoisted out of the past darkness by the "Third Party Movement" scholars and their educational programs, so they realize the dawn of a new day far different from the Robert Hale nightmare as to any such mischief as he says is due us if non-interest paper currency is used to cure our present evils.

Secondly, if he does not want to accept the above arraignment as a solution to his ridiculous and unwarrantable stand, then a plea of ignorance on the subject is left as a panacea for the aberration displayed. What element can Mr. Hale be catering to? Certainly not the hungry masses needing work and its equivalent currency to "keep the wolves from the doors" in the way of providing the sadly needed necessities of life—the most conspicuous thing lacking the last five years.

President Lincoln, near the close of the war, referring to the Shylocks manipulating at Wall Street, said: "Yes, we may all congratulate ourselves that this cruel war is nearing its close. It has cost a vast amount of treasure and blood. The best blood of the flower of American youth has been freely offered upon our country's altar that the nation might live. It has been indeed a trying hour for the republic; but I see, in the near future, a crisis approaching that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned and an era of corruption in high places will follow and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all wealth is aggregated in a few hands, and the Republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of war. God grant that my suspicions may prove groundless." Lincoln certainly will read the "handwriting on the wall."

What a wonderful prophecy, and how terribly it is being fulfilled by such stuff as Hale is trying to "put over" about money such as Lincoln (his "Greenbacks") so successfully used to save the nation.

Salmon P. Chase, noted financier, Secretary of the Treasury under Lincoln: "My agency in procuring the passage of the National Bank Act was the greatest financial mistake of my life; it has built up a monopoly that affects every interest in the country; it should be repealed; but before this can be accomplished, the people will

Four bills killed by the Maine House Tuesday included one increasing the educational requirements of applicants for admission to the bar, another which would have permitted payment of truck registration fees in installments, a third exempting certain personal property from attachment and a fourth providing for the licensing and bonding of collection agencies.

The Senate rejected by a 20 to 7 vote a bill providing that the State assume a bonded indebtedness of the Hancock-Sullivan Bridge District amounting to approximately $40,000, and accepted an unfavorable taxation committee report on a bill to tax national bank deposits.

It accepted a majority favorable report by the Judiciary committee on a bill providing for a chief deputy to serve as sheriff during vacancies in that office, and a favorable State Prison report on a bill for the State Prison to manufacture Maine motor vehicles registration plates.

Concurring with the House, the Senate passed to be engrossed, a bill providing that no motor vehicle operators' licenses shall be issued to residents of the State except on presentation of poll tax receipts.

A bill to license and regulate the location of billboards in rural sections was passed to be engrossed by the Senate in concurrence with the House, and then tabled on motion by Senator Harold F. Schurle of Cumberland. He also tabled a favorable report by the Legislative Publicity Committee, of which he is chairman, on a bill appropriating $150,000 annually for the Maine development commission to advertise the State's recreational, industrial and agricultural advantages.

Awaiting the Supreme Court's opinion on the constitutionality of a bill to increase resident hunting and fishing licenses from 65 cents to $1.15 each, the House tabled the measure until Friday. An unfavorable Ways Bridges committee report on a resolve for completion of Route 7, between Belfast and Brooks, was accepted by the House.

Pari-mutuel betting on harness horse racing in Maine was assured yesterday with enactment by the Senate of a bill setting up a racing commission and providing for such betting. Only the signature of Gov. Brann, who has said he would sign the bill, was necessary to make it law.

The Supreme Court of Maine ruled yesterday that the increase in the resident hunting and fishing licenses as contained in a bill now before the legislature was constitutional as it is a "regulatory" measure and "is not, within the meaning of the Constitution, one for revenue." The bill, which would raise the price of a resident license from 65 cents to $1.15 each, was questioned in the House by Clark of Cooper, who pointed out the bill was introduced in the Senate and if it was a revenue measure must originate in the House. Its constitutionality was then questioned and the court asked to pass upon it.

A bill to legalize pari-mutuel harness race betting Tuesday received the final stamp of approval of the House, while a State lottery bill, designed to supply funds for an old age pension plan, was rejected.

Over the protests of opponents who said it was a "joke and gambling" bill the House enacted the pari-mutuel measure which proponents said would increase attendance at Maine agricultural fairs. The vote for enactment of that bill was 93 to 45 while the lottery bill was indefinitely postponed at the enactment stage by a vote of 76 to 67. Knox County representatives who voted for indefinite postponement were Ayer of Union, Fogg of Rockland and Wheeler of St. George; while those who voted against postponement were Elliot of Thomaston, Sleeper of Rockland and Hobbs of Hope.

The pari-mutuel bill provided for appointment of a racing commission and stipulated that the State should receive three and one-half percent of all pari-mutuel pools while the fairs associations should receive 6 and one-

The meetings which began last Sunday at Littlefield Memorial Church, Rev. John Quigg, pastor, are going ahead in fine shape. The people are much interested, and it is feared that by the end of the week people will not be able to find room. The pastor is very enthusiastic and says of the evangelists: "They live what they preach, hence the people come."

Through the week many special duets and solos have been arranged, but on Friday night Robert Forbes Taylor the pianist and violinist will give a violin recital. "Such sweet music has never been heard before in this church," said one of the leading ministers of Massachusetts. Everywhere the young men have been "Bob's" music has attracted great crowds. He plays with soul and feeling and puts into his music his whole self. He has been in the hospital recovering from a breakdown but is now well on the road to recovery and will attempt to play the entire recital. He will play such numbers as "Toy Soldier's March" by Kreisler, "Bourree" by Handel; "Cavatina" by Bach.

This is a great night, dedicated to great music. Rev. Philip F. Taylor will preach a short sermon to young people, as this is designated young people's night. His topic will be "Sin-Fun and the Christian." He gives 20-minute sermons, straight from the shoulder, right from the heart, and men and women listen to this young man of God. He believes that Jesus Christ is just as vital today as at any other time. "We need less preaching and more living, we need to realize that other people are looking at us as men of God, we must live for Christ everyday, and in that living prove to men and women that Christ lives in us."

SAW THE BIG BOYS

Mel Wotton In the Bleachers When Babe Ruth Practices In St. Pete

Back from their first winter in Florida, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Wotton are recalling happy incidents of their seven weeks' stay in St. Petersburg. In that period they were greatly favored by the weather, for there were no frigid spells such as the earlier arrivals had encountered, but they did learn how warm this tropical region can be in March, and with the temperature hovering around the 90's were not at all unwilling to come back and face our quixotic spring weather—easterly winds, April showers and all. A solitary rainstorm marked their sojourn in the southeasternmost State, and, quite characteristically, it was a downpour.

The gamut of Floridian diversions was run, but to "Mel" there were, of course, two things that could be listed as outstanding. One of these was Rotary Day. St. Petersburg has a club of 90 members, but in winter their identity is almost lost, for the reason that the tourist attendance brings the group up to 300 or even 350. On the first day that he attended Mr. Wotton met seven members who were his old friends. The tourists present came from all over the country and several from foreign countries.

A confirmed baseball fan, Mel naturally wended his way out to the park where the Boston Braves were holding their spring practice, meeting, among other teams, the New York Yankees, St. Louis Cardinals and the bewhiskered baseballists known as the House of David team. The Cardinals, present holders of the World championship caught his special fancy.

Babe Ruth, who is expected to bring many dollars into the Braves' till this summer, even if he doesn't play much, was cavorting around first base. Rather too much tummy to be graceful, but with his eye still on the ball. The first ball pitched to him nearly went for a home run, and Mel almost lost his hat in his excitement.

Rabbit Maranville was seen in action, mostly practice. The ankle which he broke at St. Pete a year ago still bothers him. Mr. Wotton was filled with the notion that Wally Berger is going to shine this season as a home run king. The Deans—Dizzy and Daffy—looked good in practice.

Mr. Wotton was mildly interested in the dog races, and had a look-in on shuffle board and some of the other devices which make Northerners forget they are homesick.

Emerging from a Rotary session one day he met Henry B. Bird who had been looking all over for him. He also met quite a number of other Knox County tourists.

Included in the sightseeing trips made by the Wottons was one to the Bok Singing Tower, which annually is visited by hundreds of tourists, and greatly admired by everybody. Another congenial acquaintance formed by Mr. Wotton at Rotary meetings was with ex-Mayor Lang of St. Petersburg, who had charge of the floats which were to appear in an approaching celebration. Their camaraderie was emphasized by the fact that both are rabid baseball fans.

St. Pete has a summer population of about 48,000 but in winter they widen the sidewalks to accommodate the tourist influx, which this winter was the greatest in that city's history, more than doubling its population.

Mr. Wotton reports reasonable prices, especially for food.

It has been a poor season for the growers of grape fruit and oranges, and much of the frozen fruit still lies on the ground.

A buck deer estimated to weigh between 175 and 200 pounds invaded the center of Rockland's residential district yesterday forenoon exhibiting much interest in the Public Library premises and contiguous territory. At the residence of Dr. Charles D. North, 15 Beech street the animal walked directly up to the dining room window and proceeded to lap the panes—a tribute, no doubt, to the culinary delicacies which the room probably contained. Feminine on-lookers were a bit fluttery about the presence of this denizen of the forest, but their fears were groundless, for after spending a few moments in the so-called Quality Hill district the buck headed toward the tall sticks.

The Legislative committee on Judiciary Tuesday sent out a majority report in favor of a bill permitting the federal government to acquire land in Maine for national forests. It will go to the Legislature tomorrow.

The federal government would be permitted by the bill to acquire 300,000 acres of land within the counties of Hancock and Washington and that part of Penobscot County easterly of the Penobscot and Mattawamkeag Rivers; 300,000 acres in that part of Aroostook County which lies south of a line commencing at the north-west corner of Township 7, Range 5, and running easterly along the north line of that township and the continuation thereof easterly to the international boundary line; such lands within that portion of Oxford County now included or within five miles of the purchase unit boundaries of the White Mountain national forest, and 200,000 acres in Cumberland County.

No land would be acquired without the consent of the owners and jurisdiction over persons upon the lands would remain in the State except so far as offenses against the federal government were concerned.

The Maine Development Commission's annual appropriation for each of the next two years to advertise the State's recreational, agricultural and industrial activities would be increased from $50,000 to $150,000 under a bill favorably reported to the Legislature Tuesday by the Publicity committee. Of the proposed appropriation, $50,000 would be for advertising agricultural products raised in Maine. The same committee submitted an adverse report on a separate bill appropriating $50,000 for each of the next two years to advertise farm products raised in the State.

The House Tuesday cleared the way for consideration of a lone sales and income tax bill today as it accepted six unfavorable reports from the Legislative Committee on Taxation on major tax bills and tabled a seventh for debate Thursday. An eighth tax bill, providing for increasing the present chain store tax, was tabled with its unfavorable report by the sponsor, Representative Laval R. Lebel, who later said he would submit a new draft Friday.

Gov. Brann Tuesday signed 20 bills and resolves, among them one authorizing the State Health Department to refuse permits for sale of cosmetics and beauty culture apparatus considered dangerous, poisonous or injurious to health. The bill also included maniacs in the definition of persons practicing beauty culture.

Other measures signed included:

Providing for the registration of cosmetics on payment of 50 cents for each sample. This bill would repeal a cosmetic law enacted in 1933, the constitutionality of which has been challenged.

Providing that the State Department of Labor and Industry be notified of cancellation of insurance on steam boilers carrying over 15 pounds gauge pressure.

Including restaurant workers in the statute by which employees must be paid weekly.

Permitting issuance of birth certificates for children who have required the status of legitimate children by the marriage of their parents.

A thousand wives
barbers will thank us for this nudge

It's addressed to the men who, haven't planned on even a haircut for Easter. You know... the well meaning chaps who are signing partnership papers with old age without realizing it.

First you need a haircut... and Rockland has lots of good barbers. Next you need an Easter hat... and Rockland has loads of fine hatters (you see we're not selfish).

Of course we'd like to have you come here for the hat but we'd rather have you go somewhere else than see you on Easter morning in the old hat you're wearing.

Edwin L. Brown, who is today numbered among Maine's most successful artists, was naturally gratified yesterday upon receipt of word that his "marines" had been voted the best on exhibition at the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Art Club. There was a very large number of entries from all over the country. Mr. Brown's offerings represented three scenes in the vicinity of Boothbay Harbor, whether he goes each summer to indulge in this profession to which he is so ardently devoted.

The Parent-Teacher Association will meet Monday night. The speaker will be Dr. Arthur A. Hauck, president of the University of Maine. Music will be furnished by the Junior High School Glee Club, directed by Miss Mary Bird.

State Senator William Bissett of Portland—a former Vinalhaven man—is the candidate for the Republican nomination for Representative to Congress from the First District. His great popularity in Cumberland County will make him a formidable contestant.

Miss Eloise Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Dunn of Thomaston, has been elected an editor of the school annual, Oak Leaves, published each spring by the students of Oak Grove School. Miss Dunn is spending the spring vacation with her parents in Portland.

Judge Frank E. Southard of the Augusta Municipal Court will be a candidate for department commander when the State convention of the American Legion is held in this city in June. It is understood that there may be two candidates in the eastern part of the State.

The benefit supper and dance given by loyal Owl's Head women at the Town Hall last night netted the satisfactory sum of $51.37, William Butman carried away the guess cake and Fred Cheney the candy. The promoters of the event are deeply grateful to the Rockland merchants who assisted.

Knox Pomona Grange meets at Pioneer Garage, East Union Saturday. This program will be presented: Address of welcome, John Kearly; response, May Jones; singing by Grange; speaker, Leon Shepard, Criminal Investigator of State Highway Police; song, Louie Carroll; recitation Frances Crooker; question of discussion, "Do farmers spend too much money on cars and not enough on fertilizers?" dialogue, Raymond Anderson; music and song, Fred Maxey.

The meeting of Claremont Commandery Monday night is still a topic of much discussion among the Sir Knights, one of the reasons being that it was the largest Commandery gathering in several years, bringing out, as it did, quite a number of members, who have not recently partaken of Templar activities. Camden Commandery sent down a large delegation and there were visitors from all parts of the State. The Sir Knights are emphatic and unanimous in the opinion that the new commander, C. Earle Ludwick did an exceptionally fine piece of work during the conferring of the Order of the Temple. His administration is starting most auspiciously, and bids fair to be one of the best for a number of years.

EDNA H. GARDNER

Edna H. Gardner, a resident of this city 21 years, died March 30 after a year's illness at her home 95 Union street. She was born Feb. 25, 1865, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Samuel J. Allen of St. George. She moved to Rockland in 1914 and lived many years on Grace street. Although of retiring nature, her willingness to help in time of trouble, her sunny smile and pleasant word, won for her many friends. The many floral tributes gave testimony to the high esteem in which she was held.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Gladys Prescott, and Mrs. Ruth Wooster; four sons, Arthur L. Allen, Harold and Frank K. Gardner, all of this city. There also survive nine grandchildren and one great grand-daughter.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ruined, financially, by the stock market crash, James Nelson, Boston merchant, breaks the news to his household. Nance is on the verge of her introduction to society, the date of her debut having been set. A short time before, an elderly cousin of Nelson's, Columbine, had written suggesting that Nance come to her at Pine Ridge, Colo., as a paid companion. The offer had been regarded by the family as a joke.

CHAPTER II.—Jack urges Nancy to accept Cousin Columbine's proposition, thus relieving the father of a certain financial burden, and offering to go with her so that she will not feel too lonely. The girl is at first apologetic, but when she agrees that Jack write to Cousin Columbine, and they will wait her answer, Columbine writes welcome to both of them, and despite their parents' apprehension of Nance's reaction to the situation they knew, she must face it, it is arranged that the two shall go.

CHAPTER III.—At the railroad station the youngsters are welcomed by Cousin Columbine. They are somewhat dismayed by her unconventional attire and mannerisms, but realize she has character and a certain charm. The driver of their car is a young man, Mark Adam, son of a close friend of the old lady. The devotion to Nance's city ideas of Pine Ridge appals the girl.

CHAPTER IV.—The newcomers meet Aurora Tubbs, Cousin Columbine's cook and housekeeper, and Matthew Adam, Mark's older brother. The old-fashioned furnishings of her bedroom further depress Nance. Cousin Columbine explains her reasons for desiring Nance to come to her, and tells some experiences of her 73 years of life on the plains.

CHAPTER V.—Nance gets better acquainted with Matthew Adam, and is impressed, despite the handicap of his bashfulness, by his evident good sense and his good looks. Jack finds a temporary job.

CHAPTER VI.—The fascination of a new country wears off, and time begins to hang heavily on Nance's hands. An absence of interesting reading, both in the house and in the community, gives her an inspiration.

CHAPTER VII.—Writing home to Massachusetts, Nance outlines an idea for a public library at Pine Ridge (on a small scale), and with a foundation of contributed books. The family greets the idea with enthusiasm and agrees to comply with her wishes. After an afternoon of Christmas shopping with Matthew, Nance returns home to find the house brilliantly illuminated. Evidently something out of the ordinary is at hand.

CHAPTER VIII

NANCE was never to forget the moments that followed. As Matthew drew up before the house he blew three sharp blasts on the automobile horn, and said: "Don't bother with those bundles, Nance. I'll lug 'em in in just a minute." Indeed, Nance was so puzzled by the amazing illumination that she failed to see that they were stopping at the seldom-used front door; and still dazed, but with Matt's hand on her elbow, she was firmly propelled into what Jack called "the sacred parlor."

For a moment she just stood still, thinking the room was full of people until she realized that it wasn't a crowd at all, only the parlor beautifully garlanded with Christmas greens, looked different. A second glance disclosed the company: Cousin Columbine in her scarlet middy and laced boots; a little woman with soft brown hair, and eyes shining with merriment, who must be "Eve Adam." By her side stood the tall, lean, unburned man who was her husband, looking, it seemed to Nance, very little older than his sons. Then came Juanita Tubbs—Juanita in a sleeveless gown of such dazzling, variegated colors that Nance almost blinked when she looked straight at it and was thankful that Mary Taylor was wearing white. Mark ("all dressed up in his Sunday best," thought Nance), towered between Mary and a slender girl in blue ("The cousin from Denver?"; while Jack, spic and span in his blue serge suit, and another boy ("The last of the Apostles, of course!") stood just behind them; and as a climax came Aurora attired in a gown of emerald taffeta with six diamonds on the skirt and the inevitable apron tied snugly around her ample waistline.

No wonder Nance stared! She stared so long that everybody shouted with laughter; and it was Cousin Columbine who explained: "It's only your debut, child. Don't look so dazed!"

"Your debut, staged in a different setting," smiled Eve Adam, and coming forward kissed Nance on the cheek. "Welcome to Pine Ridge society, my dear! I really think we gave you a surprise."

"And if she don't run straight upstairs and put on that pretty dress I took out of her closet," spoke up Aurora, "my company dinner'll be in ruins. Matthew Adam, you'll find your good clothes in Miss Columbine's bedroom, and don't be slow as cold molasses, either."

"Did—did you know this all the time?" cried Nance, wheeling on Matthew.

"I-I sort of suspected it," he confessed. "I mean—"

"Oh, come on, Matt," broke in his brother Mark impatiently. "Time dies; and you've got to beautify yourself in honor of our debutante!"

"... And will you believe it," Nance wrote home next day, "when I came down, there stood Matthew Adam looking absolutely stunning in a well-cut tux! I almost passed out at sight of him!"

Probably Matthew felt somewhat the same at the same moment, for Nance herself, in orchid chiffon, and silver-shod, was (according to Mark Adam) "too easy to look at for any feller's peace of mind."

"You'll have to seat her next to Matthew, Miss Columbine," he said ruefully. "She makes the rest of us look like hick cowboys. I'd have swiped that tux myself, Matt, if it had been two sizes bigger. It's the only tuxedo in Pine Ridge, Nance—a relic of campus days which transforms my cowering brother into a 'glorious Apollo,' as you can see for yourself. And—"

"Shut up!" commanded Matthew, blushing, while his mother slipped a protecting arm through his, and Aurora announced shrilly:

"Come on! Get seated while I dish up the potatoes. Sakes alive, Nance, you look like those pictures in the love magazines. And you, too, Matthew Adam. That white shirt's awful becoming. Everything's ready and all those pesky candles lighted. Come on in!"

"I never saw a prettier table," wrote Nance to her mother. "Even that awful green-brown china was inconspicuous, because it blended with the green-bronze leaves of the kinkinick with which Mrs. Adam had decorated everything. There was a big brass bowl of it in the center of the table, and long sprays laid at intervals on the white cloth—a cloth bought in Denver in 1901, please understand, and used only on state occasions!"

"The terrible lamp was banished, and four tall brass candlesticks held red candles, while a big red candle stood at every place. Even Cousin Columbine's scarlet middy seemed made for the occasion. She looked very distinguished at the head of the table; and they put me at the foot with 'Father Adam' on one side, and Mark (despite protests regarding his apparel) on the other.

"And did we eat? As Jack remarked, Aurora had 'done her darndest,' and the old-fashioned Christmas dinner was superb. Mr. Adam made place cards; and the minute I saw his beautiful lettering I knew who was going to paint the sign for my Aladdin library! But to get back to my debut. . . ."

The account of this party grew into the longest letter that Nance Nelson had ever written, which ended with a request to forward it to Aunt Judy. . . . for I can never write all this again. I wonder what those wild Spar girls will think of my debut, Mother? Not much like what we planned, was it? But believe me, it was a grand party just the same."

It is probable that all those present agreed with the girl. When at last they arose from the table and sought the gaily festooned parlor, each one added his bit to the entertainment. There were charades; old-time songs with melodeon accompaniment (a melodeon brought from Chicago in 1881, Miss Columbine assured them proudly); as well as strictly modern "croonings" rendered by Mark; while Matthew left Nance breathless for the second time that evening when, with the simple aid of Juanita's tam o' shanter and a plaid scarf, he was transformed into a very creditable Harry Lauder, and forgetting his shyness, sang "I Love a Lassie" in a delightful baritone.

Not until then did Aurora remove her apron.

"I'm going to recite 'Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight,'" she told be arrayed on one side and the banks on the other in a contest such as we have never seen in this country."

Daniel Webster: "The freest government would not be long acceptable if the tendencies of the law were to create a rapid accumulation of property (wealth) in few hands and to render the great mass of the population dependent and penniless." Doesn't this apply to these times?

President Theodore Roosevelt: "I feel that we shall ultimately have to adopt a scheme to put it out of the power of the owners of enormous fortunes to hand down more than a certain amount to any one individual."

Wall Street Journal, 1903, before being hushed up: "Menacing is the concentration in the banking world that comes from combination, consolidation and other methods employed to secure monopolistic power."

President Woodrow Wilson: "There is the currency question—are we going to settle this question so long as the Government listens only to the council of those who command the banking situation, etc."

President Franklin Roosevelt, 1932: "Millions in want will not stand by satisfied silently forever while the things to satisfy their needs are within easy reach. Our economic life is dominated by about 600 corporations who control two-thirds of American industries . . . and, if continued, we shall have all American industry controlled by a dozen corporations and run by perhaps 100 men, etc."

But what is he doing about these concentrations of wealth except to patronize them to the borrowing extent of over 30 billions, and nobody knows how on earth we will just pay the billion dollars a year interest on the same, let alone this gigantic octopus of debt that a Lincoln form of interest-free currency (Hale's printing press worriment) would have avoided. Roosevelt later said "We find fewer than three dozen private banking houses and stock-selling agencies in the commercial banks, directing the flow of American capital within the country etc. Just ponder over this and it is still going on in spite of his three years service as President and main spokesman for our great 'down and out' nation that is absurdly attempting to 'borrow itself out of debt.'"

Enough has been revealed in these few quotations to prove a system of finance existing that Mr. Hale dared not tell the real facts about but goes to ranting on the "failure and danger of paper currency"—a thing that never happened in this country—as he complacently hatches up a "hot the company. "I said that piece at a church social when Tubbs was courting me, and there wa'n't a dry eye in the place when I got through."

This number brought such a deafening round of applause that the good woman beamed with pleasure.

"It's your turn now, Miss Columbine," she said. "You tell us a story about old times, to calm us down."

Cousin Columbine smiled as Matt drew her chair into the center of the group.

"I'm going to tell you about my first Christmas tree," she began. "I couldn't have been more than three or four years old, and Mother and I were alone as we so often were in those days when Father was off adventuring. We were expecting him home, of course; but on Christmas eve when he did not come, Mother went out and cut a tiny Christmas tree herself, and set it up in the corner of our one room."

THE OBSERVER

Mrs. A. I. Perry

One poet says "I wish I was a rock, a sittin' on a hill, and doin' nothin' all day long but just a sittin' still." The early days of spring do make one feel rather listless and uninspired. Then the days grow longer, birds arrive, buds swell on the trees and shrubs, the snowbanks dwindle and disappear and we begin to poke around our perennial beds.

Already we have studied catalogues and made plans for our gardens (in mind at least) for the coming season. Whatever we plant let's try to do what we can to control insect pests and plant diseases, taken in time this is not difficult. Many people have told me that gladioli thrives far these insects have not found my garden. Two seasons ago when the State horticulturist visited my garden he advised me if I ever had thrips to use a spray as follows: To three gallons of water add one pint molasses and one tablespoon paris green, and spray early, and for treating the bulbs or more properly speaking the corms, he advised two methods, using naphthalene flakes which only kill insects and using bi-chloride of mercury which will kill both insects and plant diseases.

I have never found thrips, but that season when I dug my corms I found spots on some of them which looked like some kind of fungus disease. I used the bi-chloride treatment that year and was well repaid for my work. I had better bulbs and stronger and better plants and flowers. Here is the formula which I used: Mercuric bi-chloride (corrosive sublimate) one ounce to eight gallons of water. Use in wooden vessel, and soak three hours, will kill both insects and diseases. I got a large lard tub with cover, labeled it Poison, and kept the cover on, and away from small children.

Wishing you all success with your gardens, and help and health to care for them. Yours for more and better flowers. Mrs. A. I. Perry N.C.C. 4.

Hope, April 2.

NORTH WASHINGTON

The wood sawing outfit owned by W. A. Palmer was in operation last week and many wood piles were quickly cared for by this mechanism. Simon Turner and family have lately moved from his location at the head of Crystal Lake, Razorsville, to the property here, owned by Albert Leigler.

P. W. Cunningham continues to slowly improve in health, but is advised by his physician to safeguard against overexertion.

Lawrence Grover was a caller in Jefferson last week.

W. H. Grover's physical condition shows little change. He is now able to sit up part of the time and to go out of doors occasionally.

The roads here are in rather bad condition and it is difficult for the Lenfest school bus to traverse them in its daily trips.

SPRING CLEANING

[For The Courier-Gazette] Spring has come, and with it troubles. Springs of buckets, mops and brooms; There's no longer peace and quiet—My poor life is out of tune!

From the cellar, boxes, bundles, Barrels, relics, rubbish heaped—In garage the car is stranded, There's no room for weeks and weeks!

Each floor, in turn, creates a havoc, Ceilings cleaned, and walls so bare; The attic too gets renovated—No more hiding treasures there!

Meals are never served on schedule, Things are getting worse and worse; I've a mind to go to Reno, And obtain a spring divorce!

There's the office, whence I hasten To escape from every care; But the typist there has vanished, Leaving varnished desk and chair.

So I take my rod and tackle, To the Big Woods I must go; To my cabin safe and quiet—Nestled safe midst trees and snow.

When they settle down to normal, I'll return to club and den; But I'll never stay to suffer, When spring cleaning comes again! —Nellie Sheldon Allen.

The hatchery report for February indicates an increase of 14% in number of chicks hatched. This, however, is a slowing down from the January report. There also was an increase of 53% in future orders for chicks over a year ago. Maine is one of the States that show a big increase in both chicks hatched and future orders.

Knox-Lincoln won many honors at Farm and Home Week held last week. The outstanding was the awarding of the Farm Bureau Membership prize to Henry Keller of West Rockport, president of the county organization. This is the second time that Knox-Lincoln has won this contest, the first time being in 1931.

In the wood chopping contest, Simon Hamalainen of West Rockport, won third prize, being only two seconds behind W. A. Soule of Penobscot county and eight seconds behind James Woodbury of Waldo County.

In the egg and chick show the county also won many honors. L. E. Carner of Sheepscott placed first and second with 100 day old chicks and won a silver cup by having the best lot of barred rock chicks in the show. In the Egg Entries Hatchery class, Edgar Smith of North Edgcomb placed second, and L. E. Carney of Sheepscott, third. In the commercial class, L. E. Carney of Sheepscott placed fourth, and Robert Ball Sr. of Tenant's Harbor, fifth. In the 4-H Club class, the following youngsters placed: Sylvan Webb of Damariscotta, second; Paul Weeks of Damariscotta, third; and Russell Chandler, of Nobleboro, fourth.

A blueberry meeting will be held at the Grange Hall, West Rockport.

Gossipers Peeved

Mrs. Robert Hickey of Roseville, Calif., writes: "My doctor prescribed Kruschen Salts for me—he said they wouldn't hurt me in the least. I've lost 17 lbs. in 6 weeks. Kruschen is worth its weight in gold."

Mrs. Hickey paid no attention to gossipers who said there was no safe way to reduce—envious women who don't like to see others youthfully slim. She wisely followed her doctor's advice. Why don't YOU?

Get a jar of Kruschen today (lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle) and if you don't lose 12 lbs. and feel years younger and healthier—money back. Simply take half teaspoonful in cup of hot water every morning (tastes fine with juice of half lemon added).

Typical of our Service and our workmanship is the equipment of this organization. No family will ever need apologize for the modernity or comfort or appearance of any of Davis' equipment or rolling stock.

This is a fact worthy of your consideration because many have had to apologize for calling one whose equipment was not up to the minute.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache caused by constipation—you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

FORD Strikes a new note in INTERIOR DESIGN-

● THE MODERN MOTIF—Red and black accentuate the instruments, making them easier to see. Control knobs and cigarette lighter are ivory colored plastic. Center striping is chromium. Convenient glove compartment. Everything is designed to be useful, first—functional beauty inevitably follows.

EXPERTS in color design are enthusiastic about the new Ford Deluxe interiors. They have "spotted" immediately a new note in interior design—the subtle use of taupe grey as a background for feminine costumes.

Window mouldings, door handles, the instrument panel and even the beautiful, slim steering wheel, are all finished in blended greys. This color scheme cannot possibly clash with even the most brilliant ensemble. On the contrary, it will accentuate it.

And the upholstery!... Here beauty is coupled with long-wearing quality characteristic of custom-built cars. In all Ford Deluxe closed cars you have your choice of two materials at no extra cost. Mohair or soft, pin-stripe Broadcloth in Sedans and Coupes. Bedford Cord or one hundred percent Wool Suede in Touring Sedans. See the stylish, new Ford interiors at your nearest Ford Dealer's today.

THE TWO ROOSEVELTS

What "Franklin D." Said In 1932 and What Franklin D. Is Doing

Under the caption "The President as Prophet" the Chicago Daily News recently published this editorial:

No man, in 1932, was more vehement than Franklin D. Roosevelt in his warnings against the encroachments of bureaucracy. No man was more opposed to the excessive interference of government in business. No man perceived more clearly the perils of an unstable currency and an unbalanced budget due to administrative extravagance.

Government was attempting too many things, he said in Sioux City, in 1932. It "has piled bureau on bureau, commission on commission. . . . Bureaus and bureaucrats have been retained at the expense of the taxpayer. . . . That burden is a brake on any return to normal business activity." Mr. Roosevelt thought at the time that he was attacking Mr. Hoover. Actually, as it turned out, he was attacking his future self.

A nation which did not carefully safeguard its credit, he said in Pittsburgh in 1932, was headed for bankruptcy. "The credit of the family depends chiefly on whether the family is living within its income. And this is so of the nation. . . . If, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending, extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy." Viewed in the light of today, were not those words prophetic?

"At the very top of the credit structure of the country," Mr. Roosevelt explained in 1932, "stand the obligations of the federal government. . . . They suffer if the federal budget is not balanced, and particularly where the deficit on one year is not cleared up in the succeeding year." If this thought was true then, is it not doubly true today?

It is the banks, he pointed out in 1932, "which are financing these stupendous deficits, and that burden is absorbing their resources. All this . . . arises from one cause only, and that is the unbalanced budget and the continued failure . . . to take effective steps to balance it." But since then the banks have been crammed literally full of government paper, the national debt has been increased from $22,000,000,000 to nearly $33,000,000,000, and the budget is more heavily out of balance than ever.

"Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continued deficits," pleaded Mr. Roosevelt in 1932. "Let us also . . . insist on a sound currency. Muddled government finance creates a general uncertainty concerning the value of national currencies. This uncertainty has a way of spreading from country to country. The world is tormented with it now." If the world was tormented with currency uncertainties in 1932, is it not even more tormented in 1935?

"It is my pledge and promise," said Mr. Roosevelt in St. Louis in 1932, "that this dangerous kind of financing shall be stopped and that rigid governmental economy shall be forced by a stern and unremitting administration policy of living within our income." Admirable pledge! Admirable promise! Would it had been kept!

The Mr. Roosevelt of 1933 evidently did not think much of the Mr. Roosevelt of 1932. To the one the other must have seemed indeed a tory. The Mr. Roosevelt of 1933 proceeded promptly to depreciate the dollar, build up an unparalleled bureaucracy, extend the government into business on an unprecedented scale, spend billions of borrowed money and plunge headlong into a series of recklessly unbalanced budgets.

"Well, old man, and what do you suggest?" smiled the president to his critics in a radio talk last year.

We suggest, Mr. President, that the Franklin D. Roosevelt of 1935, whose plans and experiments for recovery and reform are generally admitted to have failed, should now hark back to the wisdom of the Franklin D. Roosevelt of 1932. We suggest that you stabilize the dollar, abolish the new bureaucracy, take the government out of business, stop borrowing and begin to balance the budget. If these were sound measures in 1932, and would have brought recovery, as we believe, they are still sound in 1935. We suggest, Mr. President, that you keep your own promises, that you remain true to your own ideas. It is not yet too late.

THE SAUNTERER

A. B. Crocker

Robin Hood: "Hey, for the Merry Greenwood, say I, and give me a bow of yew."

Friar Tuck: "Prithee Robin, dost go hunting for the sheriff of Nottingham?"

Robin Hood: "Nay, not so. I go hunting for the Ictodes faetidus."

Friar Tuck: "A plague on thee, thou dullard, it beest an old name for the skunk cabbage."

"A-hunting we will go. /Come away to the woods".

And so, for the first time this season, we fare forth armed cap-a-pie (cap and sweater) for the Fells. "What went ye forth for to see?" Anything that came within my line of vision.

The morning opened cloudy, with promise of rain, which it did later. The schedule calls for a walk to the Fells, and climbing the tower without stopping. I did so. "What Ho! Elmer, the Boy Scout!" There are the same number of steps as when I wrote you previously. Never before has the dove of peace greeted me at the tower. A pure white pigeon was on the railing of one of the landings; whether it was a homing pigeon or came from some loft in the vicinity I do not know. I have seen flocks of pigeons flying over the tower, but I had never seen one of them light anywhere before.

I sought, and found, my ancient friend, skunk cabbage, on my journey in. Promise of a fine crop later. The Metropolitan Park employee told me that it was the severest winter he had ever known in the Fells. There are a few patches of snow, the streams are running clear but the lakes are full of ice. It was not clear enough on the tower to get a view of the New Hampshire hills. Barring two crows, one horse, and one dog, I saw no sign of life on my saunter through the Fells.

I visited my swamp, but the water is high with no signs of marsh marigolds as yet. I did not even see my friend who usually greets me on my first visit, the mourning butterfly, which was probably waiting for a sunny day to venture forth. He is the first of the butterflies to tell us of the beauty of the summer that is to come. While there was nothing on view today in my saunter to be real optimistic about, I am neither pessimistic like the poet who wrote: "The power, the beauty, and the majesty. That had their haunts in dale or piny mountain. Or forest by slow stream or pebbly spring. Or chasms and watery depths—all these have vanished".

Anyway, I was only hunting for Ictodes faetidus. By the calendar spring is here.

THE EARLY BLUE BIRD
"Lo! the snowflakes gathering around
Settle over the whitened ground.
Yet thou singest, blithe and clear.
Spring is coming! Spring is here!"

HE LOST TWO TEETH

State Senator Cowan of Lincoln County In An Augusta Collision

State Senator George A. Cowan of Damariscotta lost two teeth and received a cut under the chin Monday night when the automobile he was operating was in collision with one driven by Emile J. Couture of Augusta. The collision occurred a short distance from the State House and sent Benedict Cormier of Augusta to the hospital with severe scalp wounds.

Senator Cowan told local police he was driving south on State street when the collision occurred. The other car was going north and the cars collided head-on. Bath machines were badly damaged.

There is a murder committed in the United States every 40 minutes.
